The successful completion of any IT project depends on the deployment of a wide range of Project Management skills – an area in which Deverill has outstanding expertise.

This specialist area requires excellent interpersonal skills, organisational capabilities, resource management and arbitration skills as well as knowledge of formal Project Management methodologies.

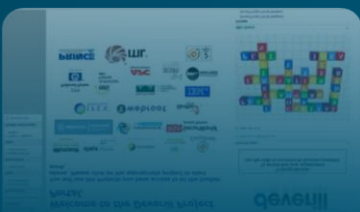

Deverill Consultants are able to offer effective Project Management services for a range of different types of IT projects including Migration, Helpdesk, Bespoke Software and Systems Rollout.

The Project Manager uses Microsoft Project or our own in house developed project portal to maintain an overall picture of the state of the project and to track resources, costs and critical tasks. Having established an effective reporting procedure making best use of communication services, the project plan is updated regularly and distributed to participating personnel.

The Project Manager will resolve implementation issues and optimise any rescheduling necessary to keep the project on track. The manager will have established a clear escalation procedure to allow for quick authorisation of changes which affect the customer's organisation.

Deverill Project Managers are always keen to work within a well established project team and ensure that they work within any guidelines which a customer may have already established. They will act either as the main Project Manager or will report to the customer's own Project Manager.

As well as keeping tabs on every detail, the Deverill Project Manager will also keep an experienced eye on all the assumptions of the project and apply a sanity check to make sure that everything will work as planned. The Deverill Project Manager will ensure timescales and critical milestones are met in vital project areas which traditionally include:-

Delivery of hardware and software

Installation

Testing

Commissioning

Preparing technical documentation

System rollout

Deverill Project Management skills have been employed by customers that include West Dorset General Hospital, Magna Housing Association, NICEIC, Norwood Schools and Bournemouth Borough Council.

The Deverill project management team has many years of experience gained in the public and private sectors and in recent years have seen a dramatic increase in the calls for their services as projects have become more complex, more critical and more staff intensive.

A professional resource involved in such projects can make a massive difference to the end result; the difference between success and failure, however it is measured.

Clear focus, forward thinking, attention to detail, excellent interpersonal skills and the ability to communicate at all levels are vital to breeding common and shared understanding and enabling the smooth flow of a project.

Experience gained in multi-site rollouts, technology refreshes, establishment and implementation of end-to-end support infrastructures, server room builds and many other high profile programmes have enhanced the intrinsic skills of our team and positioned them as critical components in successful projects.

Additionally Deverill are also able to offer Prince2 project management training to our customers to further develop their own project management skills.
